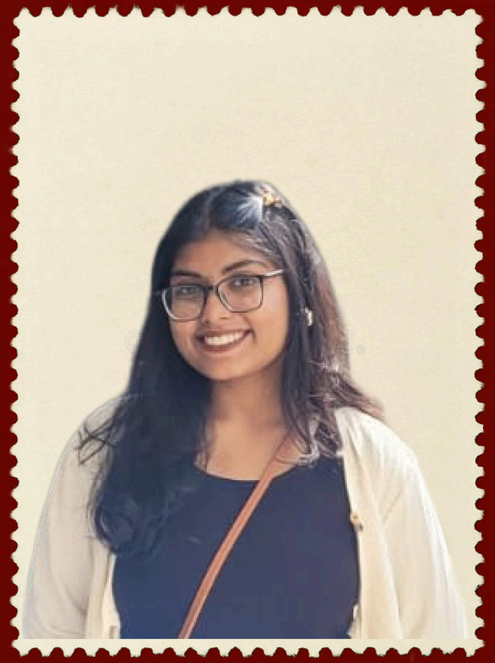
A JEWELERY DESIGN

PORTFOLIO

SOUMI MUKHERJEE



"Crafting stories through form, detail, and design."

Designer's Note

I am a jewellery design student with a strong inclination toward creating pieces that balance aesthetic elegance with thoughtful functionality. My design approach is rooted in storytelling—drawing inspiration from cultural elements, historical references, and everyday observations, which I translate into contemporary forms.

Through my work, I explore the interplay of structure, detail, and wearability. I enjoy experimenting with form generation, motifs, and mechanisms to create jewellery that is not only visually compelling but also versatile and meaningful to the wearer.
As a designer, I aim to continuously evolve my perspective, refine my craftsmanship, and create pieces that resonate with both tradition and modern sensibilities.

VersaForma

The Art of Transformable Adornment

VersaForma represents jewellery that evolves in form and function.
It reflects the idea that a single piece is not fixed, but fluid—capable of transforming to suit different occasions, identities, and styling needs..

Each piece is designed with multi-functional adaptability, allowing the wearer to transform jewellery based on occasion and styling needs. This introduces a modern lifestyle approach to heritage jewellery, where a single piece serves multiple identities.

The use of light-toned stones and gold framework enhances the regal yet subtle aesthetic, making the collection suitable for both statement and refined wear.

CONCEPT

Inspired by the ornamental richness of Victorian Jewellery, this collection reinterprets historical luxury through a contemporary lens of modularity and transformability.

The design language balances structured geometric forms—rectangles and triangles—with delicate ornamental scrollwork, reflecting the contrast between rigidity and fluidity seen in Victorian design.

Rajdwara

“Sculpting Heritage into Masculine Elegance”

Rajdwara becomes not just a collection, but a system— where architecture transforms into interactive adornment.

DESIGN BRIEF

Rajdwara is a contemporary men’s jewellery collection inspired by the architectural grandeur of Rajasthani gateways, arches, and palace facades. The collection translates structural elements such as symmetry, framing, and ornamentation into refined wearable forms.

Expanding beyond static design, the collection introduces a modular system of adornment, where individual brooches can be attached to and detached from a central kalangi. This interaction allows the wearer to customize the composition, creating multiple styling possibilities from a single set of pieces.

CONCEPT

The collection draws from the gateways (pols), arches (torans), and façade detailing of Rajasthani palaces and forts. These elements are translated into symmetrical compositions, framed structures, and intricate surface ornamentation.

Modern men who appreciate heritage aesthetics but seek versatility, personalization, and statement accessories.

CLIENT PROFILE

DEMOGRAPHIC PROFILE

Age: 25–40 years
Gender: Male
Profession: Architect, Interior Designer, Creative Director, Entrepreneur, Fashion Influencer
Location: Urban cities (Delhi, Mumbai, Jaipur, Bangalore)

PSYCHOGRAPHIC PROFILE

- Core Value (Heritage): Prefers heritage-rich ornaments that symbolize royalty.
- Core Need (Masculinity): Wants a balance of masculinity, elegance, and tradition.
- Core Driver (Quality): Values authentic polki craftsmanship and premium detailing.
- Aesthetic Goal: Wants jewellery that enhances his signature groom look and photographs well.

INSPIRATION

Architectural elements are translated into jewellery forms through curvature, repetition, and layered depth.

FORMS AND SILHOUETTE EXPLORATION

- Motifs such as lotus abstractions, paisley forms, and teardrop elements are repeatedly developed and transformed, creating a sense of rhythm and continuity. The use of scalloped edges, beaded outlines, and filigree-like detailing enhances the overall richness, resulting in forms that feel both structurally grounded and delicately ornamental, bridging heritage inspiration with contemporary jewellery aesthetics.

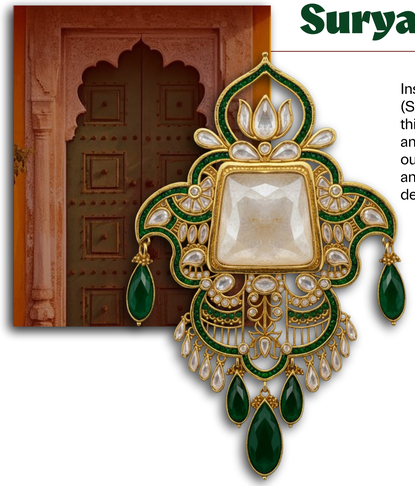
Pravesh Stambh

Emerald accents and diamond detailing enhance the verticality and richness of the piece, while the dangling elements introduce movement, symbolizing transition through space. The brooch represents strength, स्वागत (welcome), and the threshold between tradition and modernity.

Megh Toran

The composition balances solidity with ornamentation, where intricate stone settings frame the central element like a ceremonial gateway. The suspended pear-shaped drops add fluidity and grandeur, reflecting the festive essence of traditional torans. This piece embodies authority, elegance, and ceremonial richness.



Surya Pol

Inspired by the iconic sun-facing gateways (Surya Pol) found in Rajasthani architecture, this brooch emphasizes symmetry, radiance, and ornamental richness. The design radiates outward from a central axis, integrating floral and curvilinear motifs that reflect the decorative language of palace facades.

Raj Tilak Kalangi

Raj Tilak Kalangi is inspired by the ceremonial head adornments worn by Rajput royals, symbolizing honour, prestige, and identity. Drawing from the verticality of architectural gateways, the design features a structured upward flow, echoing the rise of domes and arches seen in Rajasthani palaces.

A bold central emerald anchors the composition, while surrounding pear-shaped elements and intricate detailing create a rhythmic expansion. The elongated silhouette enhances its regal presence, and the delicate drops introduce movement, reflecting festivity and grandeur.

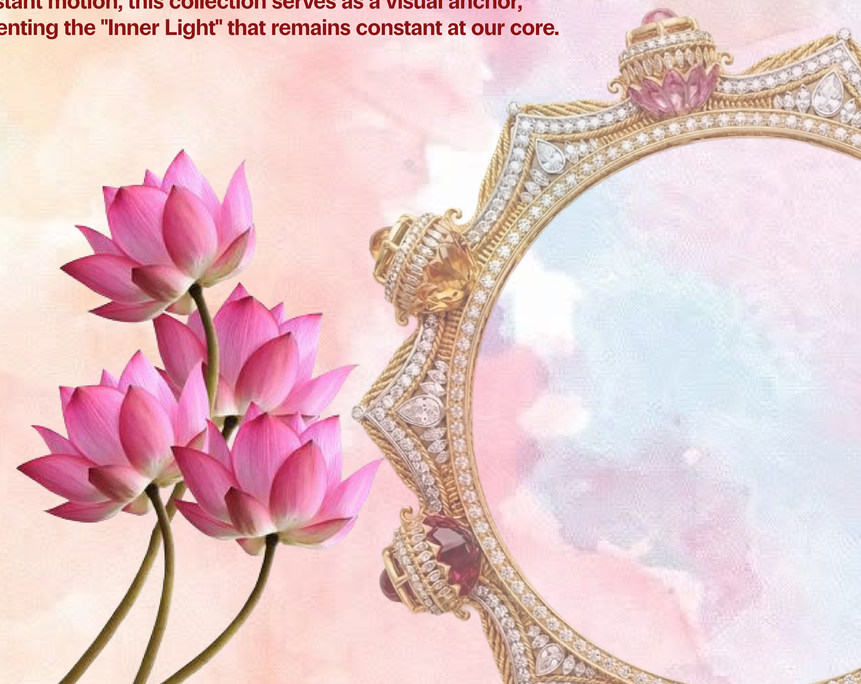
अंतर्ज्योति

The Seven Vital Energies

The design language draws heavily from the Sacred Geometry of the Lotus and the specific petals associated with the energy centers of the body. By utilizing radial symmetry, the pieces mimic the expansion of energy from a singular point of consciousness. The bangles are crafted with intricate layering and filigree work, mirroring the complexity of the human spirit. Each curve and motif is intentionally placed to guide the eye toward the center—symbolizing a return to oneself.

Antarjyoti is a collection inspired by the profound journey of self-awakening and the alignment of the seven chakras. In a world of constant motion, this collection serves as a visual anchor, representing the "Inner Light" that remains constant at our core.



CLIENT PROFILE

The Antarjyoti collection is designed for a young, design-conscious individual who values meaning and self-expression through jewellery. The client is drawn to contemporary aesthetics blended with deeper symbolic narratives, appreciating pieces that are not only visually refined but also emotionally and spiritually resonant. They seek jewellery that reflects their inner identity, balance, and individuality.
